Special Dedicatory Program to Mark New Depot Opening

Tinley Park's new railroad station, recently completed by the Rock Island Lines at a cost of $15,000 will be placed in service on Sunday, April 22 following a special dedication ceremony to be held at 3:30 pm.

Mayor Chas. Niemann of Tinley Park will give the welcoming address. T. J. O'Shaughnessy, Rock Island

I. C. Bruce, Assistant Passenger Traffic Manager, Rock Island Lines public relations officer, and I. C. Bruce, assistant passenger traffic manager, will present the station to the community, and Mrs. E. B. Campbell president of the Tinley Park PTA and Wesley J. Stemm, mayor elect, will respond.

Also participating will be the Rock Island Lines' Mixed chorus singing patriotic selections. Local Boy Scouts will present the colors and lead the Pledge of Allegiance.

The new, English style station, combining freight and passenger facilities, replaces the frame structure built in 1884. Constructed of brick and stone, the building's interior has a dark walnut finish wainscoting, asphalt tile floors, and fluorescent lighting, with a green and cream color scheme for the walls and ceiling. Modern leather upholstered furniture has replaced the conventional type, wooden benches.

The new depot, 22 feet by 68 feet, is located in a small park across the right of way from the old building. Maintenance and landscaping of this park for the past eighteen years by the Tinley Park Garden club has made it one of the beauty spots of the village. Mrs. John Swisher, president of the Garden club will also take part in the ceremony.

Among the many townspeople who will attend the dedication will be Mrs. Elizabeth Hardinger, 76, who served as operator of the depot at Tinley Park from 1887 to 1896 during which time her father, Christian Andres, was the agent.

The Tinley Park district, then known as Bremen was a farm community at the time the railroad was built through in 1852. Until the depot was erected in 1884, an old stage house, a stop between Chicago and Joliet, was used as the station.

At the time Mrs. Hardinger served as operator, the depot rested on supports about 5 feet off the ground and she remembered how the wind blew under the floor. The station was lowered and given a solid foundation about 1895.

"For many years," Mrs. Hardinger said, "there were only about three trains stopping, and the two through trains were called the 'Cannon Ball' and the 'Gee Whiz.' The latter derived its name from an incident in an Iowa town where the train passed through so rapidly that a small boy exclaimed, wide-eyed, 'Gee Whiz!'"

In 1893 the name of the village was changed from Bremen to Tinley Park the new name honoring Samuel Tinley, station agent for many years. His three sons were railroad men also. Samuel, Jr. agent at Mokena, Ill., Edward agent at DePue, Ill., and Charles, a Rock Island conductor.

Today the railroad serves 1200 citizens, providing transportation to and from the Chicago business districts and the South and West, as well as handling important freight, such as coal, grain, agricultural equipment, poultry and dairy products into and out of Tinley Park and the neighboring districts. Mokena Boys Help Make History

The following interesting letter, under date of March 28th from a Mokena boy, has been received by the Mokena Women's Service Club:

Dear Ladies: I believe its about time I let you know that I am still around. I have been receiving the News-Bulletin, even though it usually is a couple of months old. Still glad to read about the news back home.

For security reasons, I could never write about the "Big Three Meeting." We had the honor of taking the President and his party to the Big Three.

We took the Party to Malta, where I saw Winston Churchill, Sec. of the State, Harry Hopkins and scores of other Washington officials.

We picked the President up in the Great Bitter Lake in Egypt, where the King of Egypt, the King of Arabia and the Emperor of Ethiopia met with him. There were several news-reels taken, so you people probably have already seen them. It was a very enjoyable trip. I had a chance to see the President and his daughter often. Stephen Early, the President's Secretary, gave the crew a copy of the conference. It's a very interesting article. The President also signed a copy of the Radio Watch along with Admiral Leahy's signature.

Well I believe this is about all for tonight. Before I forget, my address has been changed to Fleet Post Office, San Francisco, California.

And today I have been promoted to Radio Technician 3rd Class.

Keep the News-Bulletin coming this way as it is read by all here in the Radio Gang.

I remain, Bill Homerding, RT 3-c. Russell Bennett, another Mokena boy was aboard a destroyer escort on this same trip.

FRANKFORT LIONS PASS RESOLUTIONS ENDORSING WORLD PEACE PLANS

The Frankfort Lions club enjoyed a very interesting presentation of facts regarding the coming United Nations Conference on International Organization for world peace to be held at San Francisco, April 25, by Rev. Erich Bizer of the St. Peter's Evangelical and Reformed church and by Rev. L. E. Winters pastor of the Methodist church, both of Frankfort at the Clubs' monthly dinner and meeting held Tuesday evening in the parlors of the Frankfort Methodist church. A lively discussion of the subjects followed the talks by the two pastors and the Lions passed a resolution endorsing and urging a World Organization such as is indicated in the broad, basic principles agreed on at Dumbarton Oaks, notwithstanding the fact that it is neither perfect nor complete.

Copies of this resolution are being sent to the President of the United States, Secretary of State Edw. R. Stettinius, United States Senator C. Wayland Brooks, the International Office of the Lions and the District Governors.

The Lions also decided to sponsor an indoor carnival sometime in June and if the weather permits it may be held out of doors. A committee was appointed by Lion President, William Semmler, to make arrangements for the carnival.

Washington, D. C. ARMY DISCHARGE CREDITS

Here is how the army will determine what men are to be discharged after the war in Europe is over. Special forms have been quietly sent to commanding officers in all theatres. They are to be distributed to the G.I.s who will fill them out, try to figure out the number of credits they have earned to give them a quick return home.

The one thing still undecided by the army is the number of credits necessary for immediate release. This columnist is able to reveal, however, that:

1. All credits will be determined as of the date the war in Europe is over.
2. Special credits will be given for overseas service, and overseas service will mean any service outside the continental limits of the U. S., including Alaska. Thousands of men who served in Alaska will receive overseas credit. Overseas service will be determined from the day a man leaves a port of embarkation.
3. Combat credit will be given only for those receiving the medal of honor, distinguished service cross, legion of merit, silver star, distinguished flying cross, soldiers' medal, bronze star, air medal, purple heart or bronze service stars for battle participation. No other awards or ribbons will be included.
4. Credit will be given for children who are under 18 years of age on the day the war in Europe ends, but for some mysterious reason the army will not allow credits for more than three children.

HENRY KAISER CONCILIATES

Few people realize it, and ship-builder Henry Kaiser is too modest to admit it, but he was the guiding genius behind the recently signed pledge for postwar industrial peace just promulgated by Eric Johnston, president of the U. S. chamber of commerce, CIO Pres. Phil Murray and AFL Pres. Bill Green.

Kaiser figured out the scheme last fall after seeing the terrific bitterness of the election campaign. He first approached Bill Green, told him that if Green was sincere about believing in a 60,000,000-job program, management needed assurances of labor peace. Green was agreeable. Johnston agreed to call the first meeting, invited Kaiser, Murray and Green to a hush-hush dinner in his Mayflower hotel suite, debated the entire proposal up, down and sideways.

Not content with a bare statement of unity and pledge of labor-management peace, Kaiser has now quietly proposed that the U. S. chamber of commerce, the AFL and the CIO set up a new, well-financed organization which can actively go about the business of contacting local labor leaders and local business men, preaching the gospel of cooperation on that level.

PETRILLO CRACKDOWN

Congress is so steamed up about the rambunctious practices of horn-tooter James Caesar Petrillo, head of the American Federation of Musicians, and bushy-browed John L. Lewis, mine workers' chief, that responsible labor leaders are greatly worried that it may pass the Bailey bill.

This would invalidate the agreement Petrillo won after defying the record manufacturers and the government for two years, and which provides that the manufacturers pay his union a royalty on every record made. It would also rule out the 10-cent-per-ton coal royalty Lewis asked after he saw Petrillo get his.

Even though many of them have little sympathy for the Petrillo-Lewis methods, labor leaders see in the Bailey bill far more danger than appears on the surface. For if the bill becomes law, it will knock out not only Petrillo royalty setups, but also numerous negotiated agreements whereby employers agree to pay a small portion of their payroll into health funds jointly administered by the union and the employer.

These are used to pay sickness and accident benefits, medical costs and death benefits for employees, and more and more employers are agreeing to include contributions to these funds in their contracts with the unions. There have been no complaints about these funds, but they will be illegal if the Bailey bill becomes law.

CAPITOL CHAFF

The RFC has named the New York firm of Fuller, Smith and Ross to handle advertising of surplus property to be sold through RFC. This firm is also the advertising representative for the Aluminum company of America, which has a major interest in plant facilities to be sold through RFC.

Despite the wide publicity ridiculing him a few months ago, Rep. William Gallagher, former Minneapolis street cleaner, has won the respect of his colleagues in the house.

THE FOUNDING OF THE NATION

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 18:19-24; 19:3-8. GOLDEN TEXT—Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34.

God has a purpose for the lives of men and of nations. Happy are those who seek His guidance so that their lives may be directed in right and useful channels.

God's threefold purpose for Israel, which we noted in our lesson of last week, could only be worked out in a nation which was separated unto Him, following holiness in its life and service.

Moses, one of the greatest and most able figures of all history, was God's appointed leader. His success is explained by his willingness to follow God's leading. He sought:

I. God's Counsel (18:19).

Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, having observed how he was burdened constantly by the affairs of the people, came to offer him advice. He started in the right place, by urging Moses to continue to seek God, yes, to spend even more time in the Lord's presence, asking His wisdom and guidance.

No man can lead a people in the right way if he does not have his own life in constant touch with the throne of God. Much of the failure of our day centers right there. We talk much to other men about our national and international problems. There are multiplied meetings and conferences. They do have value, but very little, unless there is a seeking of God's will.

A day of national repentance and prayer would do more for us than many weeks of discussion and debate. We need to seek God's counsel.

Note that the coming of Moses to God concerned the daily affairs of his people. That reminds us that not only the life of our nation, but that of our own homes—and our personal beings—all need God's counsel.

To aid Moses in administering the affairs of the nation, Jethro recommended the appointment of men who were to serve as:

II. God's Counselors (18:20-24).

There has been not a little criticism of Moses for accepting this advice. It is pointed out that when God puts heavy burdens on us, the way out is not to shift the load on someone else, but to seek God's special grace to bear it and to do it acceptably.

There is value in such an interpretation; but when one considers the devout and careful approach of Jethro to the matter (vv. 9-12) and his evident desire to glorify God in it, there is ground for believing that he was giving Moses good advice.

The great unorganized host of possibly two million people were going through a very difficult experience. The result was dissension and strife, often over trivial things, which needed to be settled. For all this to come to Moses seemed undesirable; therefore other men were chosen to be counselors to the people, interpreting for them the law and the will of God.

While each of us should carry every God-given responsibility with gladness, that does not mean that we are to assume that only we are able to do things. There is no more tragic figure than the pastor or church officer who tries to do everything. Why not put others to work?

How can our young people and new converts ever find a place of service if older Christians hold on to every job in the church? Let us train them; then trust them with real responsibility. Counsel, encourage, pray, direct if need be, but do not try to do it all yourself!

Now we come to the solemn and crucial moment when God was ready to establish His people and they were ready to accept:

III. God's Covenant (19:3-8).

In the sacred and awe-inspiring meeting place before Mount Sinai, where the Lord was to give them His law (Exod. 20), they made a solemn covenant with God.

In preparation for it He reminded them of what He had done for them in the past. God is the unchanging One. If He was tender and gracious toward them in the past, they could enter the future confident of His blessing. And so may we!

Note verses 5 and 6, for they give us God's great purpose for Israel. All they had to do was to obey His voice by keeping His covenant. This they, in solemn assembly, agreed to do (v. 8). How different their history—and that of the world—would have been had they kept their promise.

We lament their failure, but what about us who are so highly favored that we have Christ in our midst? Are we obedient?

Following the making of the covenant (which God will one day fulfill in spite of their failure), we have the giving of the Ten Commandments, and the establishment of Israel's center of worship in the tabernacle. It was the dwelling place of God among His people. How precious!

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

THE STORY THUS FAR: In a cold rainstorm, Flicka's colt, long overdue, is born. Ken McLaughlin, Flicka's 12-year-old owner, finds her at last in a gully, of which there are many on his father's big horse ranch in the Rockies. Ken is astonished to see that the colt is white, and evidently a throwback to the Albino, a wild stallion that is Flicka's grandsire. He realizes that the mare and her colt should be in the warm stables. When he attempts to lead Flicka she balks. Ken then tries to lift and drag the foal, but the little animal kicks and bites. Knowing then that he must get help, Ken runs to the ranch-house. There he finds only his brother Howard at home.

CHAPTER II.

"Flicka's colt's born! You've gotta help me get it in! It's down in the stable pasture. Down at the foot of that red cliff—the one you and I ride up and down!"

Ken paused for breath and Howard stared at him.

Howard always took his time. He glanced down again at the page opened on the table before him and finished reading "I'll alter your life—success depends on your bodily development—"

"Gee, Howard! Come along!"

Howard closed the pamphlet and got up from his chair. "Won't it follow Flicka up the path?"

"It can't. It's too steep. It tried, but it can't make it."

"Jimmy Christmas!" said Howard, "what'll we do? It might die if it stays out in this storm all night."

"We'll carry it!" cried Ken impatiently. "Come on! That's what I came to get you for. We gotta—"

The two boys ran up the gorge. Passing the stables Ken hesitated. "He's a regular little kicking devil," he said doubtfully, "maybe we'll have to tie him—" He headed into the stables.

"Bring a lantern!" shouted Howard, and Ken emerged with two halter-ropes, a halter and lead-rope for Flicka and the stable lantern.

The temperature was falling rapidly. Ken's face flamed and burned from the heat within him and the stinging cold without but he didn't notice. All he could think of was the white foal—white—!

They slithered down the steep path, not much more than a gully cut by the rain in the cliff, and saw the mare and foal just as Ken had left them.

"White!" exclaimed Howard, halting just as Ken had done.

Ken slipped her halter on and dropped the rope. Then the two boys together tried to grip the foal but he squealed and bit and seemed to have a dozen thrashing legs.

Suddenly Howard slipped and sat down. The colt, too, lost his footing and fell and Flicka whirled nervously and stood over him. Ken threw himself on the foal.

"Here, Howard!" he said, keeping his voice calm, "while I'm lying on him—tie his hind feet together, can you?"

Howard accomplished this, then Ken rolled over and the two boys tied the front feet and stood up, panting, while Flicka grunted anxiously over the prone body of her bleating foal.

"We can't ever carry him up that path," said Howard, lighting the lantern. "He weighs a ton—never saw such a husky colt. And is he strong!"

"He sure is," said Ken proudly, "ought to be—he's been in there two months more than a year—just growin' and eatin'—look Howard, we'll have to get him up on Flicka. She'll carry him."

"He'd fall off," objected Howard doubtfully.

"I'll ride her too and hold him on—you can lead her."

"How'll we get him up?"

"Lift him."

Howard hung the lantern on the bough of a tree and the two boys lifted the struggling foal in their arms and hoisted him onto the back of his dam.

Flicka stood with her head turned, watching them, but she seemed to know the moment her own foal was across her withers, and though she kept her head turned to see what the boys would do next, she became quiet.

"Gimme a leg up," gasped Ken, leaning against her side, holding the foal in position. And Howard placed his knee and hand and Ken scrambled up behind the colt.

"Can you hold him?" asked Howard.

"Yep. I think so—" Ken leaped over the colt, grasping Flicka's mane.

Howard took the lantern, picked up Flicka's lead rope, and went ahead.

Flicka knew now just what she had to do. And the little procession wound its way up the cliff, pausing occasionally for a breath, or for Howard to lift the lantern high and pick out the way in the smother of snow which was beating against them.

The foal lay like a sack of meal across Flicka's withers.

The first part of the journey was the worst. When that was accomplished they were on level ground, going rapidly toward the stables. Flicka whinnied with joy as the familiar smell reached her nostrils. And when she was in her stall, and the boys had untied the colt and lowered him to the floor, she stood over him and smelled and licked him and gave the deep, soft, grunting whinny by which a mare reassures her little one. The foal struggled to its feet, staggered about uncertainly, shook itself, then hunted for the teat. Finding the bone of the thigh, instead, it gave a savage bite at it and kicked out in anger.

"Gosh! Look at it!" exclaimed Howard. "What a mean little devil!"

Ken said nothing but watched anxiously. The foal found the teat at last.

"You stay here, Howard, will you?" asked Ken. "I'll go down and make her some mash. You might give her some clean straw."

"I'll rub her down," offered Howard generously, and as Ken left the stable he got a dry sack and rubbed her streaming back and flanks and neck.

A half hour later the mare and foal stood content and dry and comfortable with a deep bed of dry straw under them and a pail of mash for Flicka in the feed box.

"She's all right now," said Howard, at the door of the barn. "Come on—"

Ken pretended to be casual and offhand. "I want to wait till she's finished her mash. You go on down. I won't be long."

Howard still hesitated, eyeing his younger brother where the boy stood leaning on the rail of the manger, almost under the mare's head. "Well—I'll go ahead. I'm goin' to make some hot cocoa—want some?"

The foal lay like a sack of meal across Flicka's withers.

Howard was handy at making chocolate and flipping eggs and giving his mother a hand with the cooking.

"Sure!" said Ken. "You bet!" But he sat still on the manger rail, watching his mare, and Howard went out, closing the door behind him.

Ken stood listening to Howard's retreating steps. He heard the rasp of the corral gate being opened and closed again. Now they were alone, the mare, foal, and himself. In the stable was a sweet quietness and the smell of hay and horses.

Ken sat on the manger rail close to the feed box in which he had placed the bucket of mash, and the mare dipped her muzzle into it, ate hungrily, then lifted her head and chewed, looking at Ken, her long ears pointed forward. She had gentle golden-brown eyes with a seeing expression in them. Looking at Ken, her intelligent face was not a foot from his. He straightened the flaxen forelock that hung between her eyes, murmuring her name now and then. She swung her head around to look at the sleeping foal. The lantern, hung on the corner post, only half lit the stall.

Ken too looked at the foal. Now that he had it safely in the stable, the surprise and worry that he had felt when he first saw it took possession of him again. What a to-do this was going to make! A white foal out of Flicka! A white foal on the Goose Bar ranch where everyone knew Banner, the big golden sorrel stud that sired the yearly crop of colts.

Ken's uneasiness was linked to a series of nearly disastrous events of past years in which he and a certain line of horses had been involved. This train of events led directly to the small white foal lying there so innocently on the clean hay, and it had begun long before, when a wild stallion of the plains, called the Albino because of his white color, had stolen a mare from the Goose Bar ranch. She was the Thoroughbred, Gypsy, one of Rob McLaughlin's foundation mares. He had bought her when he was a cadet at West Point and used her for polo. When he graduated and then resigned from the Army in order to go in for horse-breeding, there were three of them that came west together and settled down on the Goose Bar ranch. Rob McLaughlin, Nell, his young New England wife, and the black mare, Gypsy. Rob bought more mares and built up his foundation stock. Then, one spring, Gypsy disappeared.

The McLaughlin ranch was not the only one in that section of Wyoming from which a fine mare disappeared. There began to be talk of a white stallion, "a big ugly devil but a lotta horse," who had formerly ranged the open land of Montana, had come across the border during a drought, and had gathered a band of mares in the open land of Wyoming, stealing from ranchers, tearing down fences, fighting and even killing other stallions.

He reigned for six years. Then a number of ranchers banded together, held a round-up, and caught the Albino and his mares, finding brands from all over the state on the hides of the stolen mares.

Gypsy of the Goose Bar ranch was there with four beautiful colts. Rob McLaughlin was delighted with their looks and speed and outstanding personalities, and took them home with him, feeling that Gypsy's philandering might contribute valuable qualities to his polo stock.

But he found it impossible to break and train the colts. Even though the fillies were bred by Banner, the Goose Bar stud, than whom no horse could be more intelligent or better mannered, yet the offspring showed the outlaw strain.

He explained it to his boys. "Colts learn from their mothers. They copy them. That's why it's practically impossible to raise a good-tempered colt from a bad-tempered dam. The colts are corrupted from birth. That is the rule. There are, of course, exceptions—we have some very striking exceptions among our own horses. Here is Gypsy, the best-mannered mare in the world—with a bunch of wild hoodlum colts—absolutely unbreakable."

"Is it because they were born and brought up with that gang of wild horses?" asked Howard.

"It's because of the prepotency of the stallion," said Rob grimly. "His wildness outweighs all her gentleness and that of her long line of aristocratic forbears. Some stallion!"

But all of this was an old story to Howard and Ken. They had grown up on the Goose Bar ranch, familiar with talk and speculation about the near-mythical personage, the Albino, and witnessing their father's struggles with the outlaw strain which, through Gypsy, had been introduced into the breeding stock.

Ken's actual involvement in this tangle was of more recent date. On a day a little more than three years ago he and Gus had been working in the meadow, and came upon a new-born foal and its dam.

"Luk at de little flicka!" exclaimed the Swedish ranch hand. "What does flicka mean, Gus?"

asked Ken.

"Swedish fur leetle gurl," explained Gus.

And when a year after that, Rob McLaughlin told Ken he could have for his own any colt on the ranch up to one year of age, Ken chose that same little golden filly and named her Flicka.

Flicka was out of Rocket by Banner. And Rocket was, by common consent, the wildest of the offspring brought home by Gypsy from her sojourn with the Albino.

Rob McLaughlin was exasperated. "I was hoping you'd make a wise choice, son," he said. "You know what I think of Rocket, of that whole line of horses—it's the worst I've got. There has never been one amongst them with real sense. The mares are hellions and the stallions outlaws. I'd have got rid of this whole line of stock if they weren't so damned fast that I've had the fool idea that some day there might turn out one gentle one in the lot and I'd have a race horse. But it's not going to be Flicka."

But Ken had fallen in love with her and could not give her up.

That summer one nightmare disaster followed the other. Flicka, as wild as her wicked black mother, fought beyond all reason when she was roped and brought in. When she could escape no other way, she made a suicidal leap into the high barbed-wire fence, and there ensued her long illness from the infected wire-cuts, terminating in McLaughlin's command that, next day, she would be shot and put out of her misery. Ken spent that night with her, sitting in the stream where she had fallen, holding her head in his arms. Gus came looking for them in the morning, and carried Ken, helpless with cold and exhaustion, up to the house.

This caused Ken's long and severe attack of pneumonia, during which, miraculously, the filly recovered.

At the end of the summer, there was one triumph which made up for everything. The filly loved Ken as dearly as he loved her, and he was able to say to his father, "She did get gentled, didn't she, dad?"

And Rob McLaughlin answered, with a softer note than usual in his voice, "Gentle as a kitten, son."

And now here she stood in the stall, a husky three-year-old, docile, gentle, beautifully trained, resting her liquid, trusting eyes on the face of her young master.

Your 1945 Garden— Soil Preparation And Fertilization Pay Dividends

AS IMPORTANT as in the construction of a home or building is the foundation of a Victory garden. And the foundation of a successful garden lies in the proper preparation of the soil.

During late winter or early spring, before the garden plot is spaded or plowed, all coarse plant remains should be removed. Remains of any badly diseased plants from a previous crop should be burned. Residues or crop remains that can be worked into the soil should be spaded under.

There is a great temptation when the days get warmer to plow or spade the garden while it is still too wet, in order to get an early start. This will do more harm than good. To determine if the soil is dry enough to work, squeeze a handful tightly into a ball and then break apart with the fingers. If the mass crumbles, it is safe to work, but if the soil clings together and cannot readily be broken up it is too wet. If the soil is worked when too wet it will become hard and cloddy for weeks or months afterwards.

If manure is not too expensive, it is the best organic matter to work into your soil, particularly if the soil is very sandy or heavy with clay. Compost, peat, leaves or some other such material is especially valuable for improving the workability and productivity of the soil. This organic matter should be spread evenly and spaded under. Decayed sawdust is beneficial, but if not well decayed will retard plant growth by using up the available soil nitrogen. During periods of fertilizer shortage, sawdust should not be used.

In heavy clay soil, if organic matter is not available, some advantage will be found in using ashes from non-lignite coal. After removal of cinders and clinkers, the ashes should be spaded in thoroughly and quantities up to two tons can be worked into an area 30 by 50 feet. Coal ashes have no fertilizing value, but improve workability of heavy soils. Ashes from lignite coal should never be used. Wood ashes have some fertilizing value, 5 to 7 per cent potash, but should be used sparingly. Not over 50 pounds of wood ashes should be used on a plot 30 by 50 feet.

Garden soils require a large amount of proper organic matter. "Trench" method has proven satisfactory.

Generally, soil should be spaded or plowed to a depth of 8 to 10 inches. The best method of spading, as generally accepted, is to spade across the garden, throwing out the first row of soil. This provides a trench into which succeeding spadefulls should be thrown, covering well all organic matter in the trench. If dry leaves are used, it is well to sprinkle them thoroughly with commercial fertilizer in the bottom of the trench. This will aid in their decay, giving them the necessary nitrogen.

The beginner is inclined to take too big a "bite" of soil at one stroke with the result that it is not broken up properly. Smaller spadefulls will aid in shattering the soil, leaving it in a loose, crumbled mass.

Trench Method Proves Beneficial

Too much stress cannot be placed upon the use of barnyard or stable manures. Cost of obtaining the manure in towns and cities, however, is expensive and therefore the use of commercial fertilizers is especially advisable. On small, intensively planted gardens, fertilizers may be sown broadcast and thoroughly raked into the upper 3 or 4 inches of soil. It should be well mixed before the seeds are planted. Some gardeners apply fertilizer two inches to each side of the seed rows and a little deeper than the seed. Apply about one pound per 25 to 30 feet of row, if they are two feet apart.

The usual method of composting manure is to place the required quantity in a low, flat pile and turn it once every week or ten days until it has been turned three or four times. After the third or fourth turning the manure can be allowed to remain in a flat pile until wanted for spreading on the garden.

If the manure is dry, water should be added to prevent burning. Where large quantities of manure are used it is possible to save the finer material for special sections of the garden. Some may be used for cold frames or hot beds.

We boys do appreciate what you folks are doing for us. I hope you all had a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Best of luck and God bless you all.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 15.

The Golden Text was, "Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved: for thou art my praise" (Jer. 17: 14).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease. . . . These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, . . . as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give" (Matt. 10: 1, 5, 7, 8).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus established in the Christian era the precedent for all Christians, as they were then, to be Christlike, to possess the Christ-spirit, to follow the Christ-example, and to heal the sick as well as the sinning. . . . The Christian Scientist has enlisted to lessen evil, disease, and death; and he will overcome them by understanding their nothingness and the illness of God, or good. Sickness to him is no less a temptation than is sin, and he heals them both by understanding God's power over them. The Christian Scientist knows that they are errors of belief, which Truth can and will destroy" (pp. 138,450).

church the chimes will be played at 8:15 P. M. and the organ prelude at 8:30, beginning the service.

A complete order of worship for both churches is already prepared and a great reverent celebration of the event will take place to which everyone is invited.

In each church, an offering will be taken to purchase for free distribution, copies of "A JUST AND DURABLE PEACE", supplied by the Federal Council of Churches

Illinois Bell To Expand Rural Phone Service

The Illinois Bell Telephone Company has announced that it is ready to resume expansion and improvement of rural telephone service as soon as war conditions permit. Many new devices and methods have been worked out, and the necessary equipment and manpower will be put to work as soon as they are available.

At the present time, it is practicable to reach about 80 percent of the nation's rural homes from existing telephone lines or lines extended at no construction charge to the user. In Illinois Bell territory, based upon their most recent study, 96 percent can be so reached.

This effort to bring good telephone service to more farmers is not new. There has been steady progress thru the years, and rural telephone service today is more highly developed in this country than anywhere else in the world. Rural Bell telephones throughout the country have increased 60 percent since 1935, or about the same percentage as city telephones. In the territory served by the Illinois Bell Telephone Company in the same period, rural telephones have increased over 115 percent as compared to about 50 percent increase in city telephones. In Illinois more than 150,000 rural and farm families have telephones.

The expansion program calls for the use of many types of physical telephone facilities, including the dial system; improved pole-line construction, and the radio telephone. Also, for several years before the war research and field trials were carried on by the Bell Telephone Laboratories and the Rural Electrification Administration aimed at perfecting a method of sending telephone conversations over power lines.

Some years before the war, a small dial central office system known as "community dial" was designed for use especially in small rural communities. About 110 of such "community dial" exchanges are in operation in Illinois, and more will be installed as soon as they are available after the war.

The telephone companies are studying the possible use of micro-wave radio systems in rural telephone service, especially to reach people in remote places.

A new wire has been developed that will permit poles to be placed farther apart than at present. This wire is much more resistant to high winds, sleet and ice, and will mean fewer interruptions of service for rural subscribers.

Dear Ladies:-

Just a few lines now while time prevails to write and sincerely thank you for the swell Christmas packages and check which I received for my birthday. It sure is swell to know the home town folks some four thousand miles away are thinking of us.

As yet I have not met up with any of the fellows from Mokena but when I was in England came close to meeting Melvin Nordsell but went for a boat ride before I got a chance to see him. I sure would like to meet up with some of the fellows but I hope none of them ever get hurt so they will have to come through this or any other hospital.

Well I will sign off until a future date.
As ever, Nick Heiman.

Entire Nation Mourns Death Of Franklin D. Roosevelt; Vast Tasks Face Truman

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT
JANUARY 30, 1882—APRIL 12, 1945.

AS THE guns of America's fighting forces sounded ever closer the doom of Nazi Germany and Imperial Japan, Franklin Delano Roosevelt died in Warm Springs, Georgia, where he had been resting for 10 days.

Death resulted from a cerebral hemorrhage at 4:35 p. m. on April 12. Mr. Roosevelt was 63. He had been President for 12 years, one month and nine days. The White House was announced as the site of the funeral, with interment at the family estate at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Less than four months had elapsed since he had taken his historic oath of office for a fourth term. Only a few weeks before he had returned from the Yalta conference where in company with Marshal Stalin of Russia and Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain he had labored to build an enduring peace.

Fate denied Franklin Roosevelt the chance to enjoy the fruits of victory over the Axis. Yet history seemed destined to enshrine him as one of the immortal American Presidents. And every citizen who mourned the untimely passing of the Commander-in-Chief felt that he was a casualty of the war just as every G. I., Marine and Sailor who had fallen in battle.

Never before had an American President died in wartime. Abraham Lincoln fell under Assassin Booth's bullet just five days after the surrender of General Lee's army at Appomattox in 1865. Woodrow Wilson lived to see victory over Germany in World War I, but he fought a losing battle for the League of Nations and died early in 1924, a defeated leader. Many historians believe Lincoln's greatness might have been dimmed in the conflicts over reconstruction that followed the War Between the States, just as Wilson's prestige was lost in the conflict over the league that followed World War I. Thus Franklin Roosevelt, dying at the height of his career just as victory was to be achieved over Germany, seemed likely to live in history as a great man.

As the American people from Main Street to Riverside Drive mourned the death of Franklin Roosevelt, their prayers went up for his successor, Harry S. Truman. For on the shoulders of this slight, gray, 60-year-old Missourian had been laid a responsibility such as no American President had ever borne.

What the consequences of the President's death would be to the United States and to the world, time alone would tell. But as Americans recovered from their first shock at the news, they quickly determined two things. The war must be prosecuted to as speedy and victorious a finish as possible. Lasting peace must be established.

And so, regardless of party or of past political differences, the people have rallied behind Mr. Truman.

The new President faces the immediate task of directing American participation in the United Nations' blueprints for a permanent world organization. He likewise faces the responsibility of establishing working relations with other members of the Big Three, so that the personal cooperation which existed between Franklin D. Roosevelt, Josef Stalin and Winston Churchill in leading the Allies toward victory

PRECEDENTS OUT:

Throughout his career as President, Franklin D. Roosevelt was known as the "precedent breaker." That title was first conferred in 1932 when he flew out to Chicago from Albany, N. Y., to address the Democratic convention that had nominated him. It continued after his election as a result of his informal methods of transacting business. But it reached a climax in his decision to seek a third term in 1940 and a fourth term in 1944.

PLAY AMATEUR SURGEON!

THE medical divisions of the armed forces give excellent service, but your returned fighter may still have an ailment, physical or mental, that needs competent care. Many men are discharged during convalescence so that they may enjoy the invigorating benefits of home, friends and a congenial job. Professional help should be obtained; problems should not be allowed to drag on. Most nervous ailments respond well to psychiatric treatment. Social workers can help with family and social adjustments. Vocational counselors can aid in the choice of training or in employment problems.

President's Life Was Characterized By Vigorous Action

Unlike the "log-cabin" presidents, Franklin Delano Roosevelt was not born into poverty. When Franklin arrived at Hyde Park, N. Y., on January 30, 1882, he came into a family that had possessed wealth for many generations. The Roosevelts had been thrifty land-owners in the Hudson valley since the first of the family came over from Holland. On his mother's side also there was a substantial fortune. Among his ancestors were many men who had served the state in various capacities.

Young Franklin attended the very fashionable Groton school, where he prepared for Harvard university. After completing the liberal arts course he entered Columbia U. law school, from which he was graduated in 1907. Two years earlier, however, he married his distant cousin, Anna Eleanor Roosevelt. Eleanor was a niece of Theodore Roosevelt, at that time in the White House.

After two years of legal practice, Franklin entered politics, running on the Democratic ticket for the New York state senate. He unexpectedly defeated a strong Republican candidate. From the beginning of his career he identified himself with reform movements, opposing the powerful Tammany organization in the statehouse. He was re-elected in 1912, by which time he had become a leader of the anti-Tammany faction.

Woodrow Wilson appointed Roosevelt assistant secretary of the navy. When World War I broke out Roosevelt proved himself an efficient administrator, handling billions of dollars' worth of contracts for ships and supplies. He served in this post throughout the war.

Ran for Vice President.

In 1920 the Democratic national convention chose him as running mate for James Cox. While campaigning for the vice presidency Roosevelt made many acquaintances valuable in later political life. Cox being defeated, F.D.R. returned to legal practice.

The following year the great tragedy of his life struck him—infantile paralysis. The big, strong young man became a bedridden invalid. For months he lay without ambition, almost without hope. Slowly his powerful will took command, however, and by persistence he partially regained the use of his muscles. It was during his convalescence at Warm Springs, Ga., that he determined to do what he could to eradicate the scourge that had almost ruined him. The "March of Dimes" campaign was the result.

At the Democratic conventions of 1924 and 1928, he aligned himself with the group supporting Alfred E. Smith, New York's governor. When Smith was nominated in 1928, Roosevelt ran for governor of his state and was elected. At the end of his two-year term he was again elected, this time by the greatest majority ever given to a New York governor.

As governor he continued the reform and improvement policies of his predecessor Smith. His achievements attracted nationwide attention. As the depression that began late in 1929 deepened, his efforts to control the mounting business failures, unemployment and distress in his state revealed his abilities as a vigorous leader in grave times.

Swept in as President.

When the national convention met in Chicago in 1932 Roosevelt was quickly chosen. He was swept into office by a plurality of seven million votes, carrying 42 states. Both houses went Democratic.

Before he could take office a wave of bank failures threatened the whole economic structure. The famous "bank moratorium" order, one of Roosevelt's first official acts, closed all banks until they could be reorganized on a sounder basis, thus preventing disastrous runs. In the spring of 1932 came the repeal of the 18th, or prohibition amendment. Then came the National Industrial Recovery Act, or "NRA," under which extensive emergency powers were granted to the President. A series of public works were authorized to combat unemployment, together with huge appropriations for direct relief.

The numerous executive and legislative acts of this first term were approved in general as necessary in the face of widespread suffering. A phrase from one of the President's speeches, "a new deal," developed into a title for the whole Roosevelt program.

In 1936 the convention in Philadelphia nominated Roosevelt by acclamation on the first ballot. He carried 46 states in the elections. This second term majority was so overwhelming that many New Dealers began to call it a "mandate from the people." During this second term a great number of measures were passed to increase the economic security of the individual, particularly the workers, farmers and small businessmen.

Dividend Printing

There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment.

A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read.

The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

We are equipped to give you the kind of printing that will prove it to you.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"When you think of the sacrifices our fighting men are making in this war, it's hard to figure out how we'll ever repay them, isn't it, Judge?"

"Yes, it really is, Tom. There are only certain things we can do. Such as...write them cheerful letters often. Send them favorite gifts from time to time. Work harder than ever to provide them with everything they need to finish their job quickly. Buy more and more War Bonds... especially during the current drive...to pay for the ammunition and fighting equipment they must have."

"All that still seems kind of small compared with what they're doing for us, Judge."

"True, but it's about all we older folks back home can do, Tom. Except one more thing. And that is to be sure our fighting men come home to the same kind of country they left behind. The kind of country their letters tell us they want. Nothing changed that they don't want changed while they're away and unable to express their wishes."

Forty-five thousand people daily are being transported on SAFEWAY buses. During a 20 hour average day that's 2250 passengers per hour. As it is impossible to secure additional buses it's just plain arithmetic to understand with that number of people they must actually be "squeezed" in . . . any way possible to get there, especially during peak rush hours.

A WORKABLE HAY DRIER

Build it now... feed richer, greener hay next winter!

Chopped Hay, as well as loose hay, can be barn-cured by the hay drier. This good-looking hay represents part of three cuttings of alfalfa that were blown in the Wright brothers' mow, near Manteno.

Hay Drier Duct Construction on the J. P. Bonfield farm near Geneva shows main air tunnel and lateral ducts over which hay is distributed. Tunnel and ducts are fed by a 36" propeller-type fan.

35 Tons of Loose Alfalfa were cured in the mow last year on the G. Y. Taylor farm, Huntley. As the partially-cured hay lay in the mow, drying air was forced through it by a 42" fan.

Protein and Carotene are saved by barn curing since leaves are not exposed to rain or lost through shattering. J. M. Clifton of Kankakee mow-cured this soybean crop.

Results from experiments on Northern Illinois farms prove that this new plan for barn curing of hay produces green, leafy hay of high protein content...cuts haying losses due to bad weather

Through research and experimentation, it has become a fact that mow or barn curing of hay with forced ventilation has developed into one of the greatest improvements in agricultural processes.

Local Farm Advisors and electric company Farm Representatives have made a thorough study of the process and have worked side by side with farmers who have pioneered in the barn curing of hay, and now the system is within the reach of every farmer who desires to put more Grade 1 hay in his barn, who wishes to do something about the haying losses that occur even under the best of haying conditions.

What it is... what it does

The hay drier consists of wooden ducts built on the mow floor through which an even distribution of air is fan-forced into and upward through the partially field-cured hay. By being able to safely put hay in the mow in a semi-green condition, protein-rich leaves remain on the stems and are not lost through handling processes. Moreover, damage from dew, rain, and excessive sun bleaching is cut to a minimum or completely eliminated. Both loose and chopped hay can be cured by the hay drier.

A hay drier for your farm?

Enthusiasm for hay driers is reflected by the number of farmers requesting installation plans and information. Since plans must be drawn according to individual barns (no two installations are identical), anyone interested in the use of a hay drier should contact his electric company's Farm Representative.

Now is the time to get the complete picture of hay drying, to work on the design for your barn, to place the order for the materials. Do it now and be ready to process next summer's first cutting by this proven drying system. Your local electric company's Farm Representative will be glad to give you full facts and figures. No obligation whatsoever.

Electricity is available to more than 86% of all the farms in the area served by the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois her pleased expression and gestures as she exclaimed to her husband, Editor Semmler, "Oh! It was wonderful!"

Chatterbox in Action

Officially known as the M-3 submachine gun, this weapon has been given a number of nicknames by men in service, one of them the "chatterbox." It is shown in the hands of Sgt. Jack M. Cohen of Cleveland, firing at German positions near the Siegfried line. More than 500,000 M-3's have been produced by the Guide Lamp Division of General Motors at Anderson, Ind., and the weapon has been in service in every theater of the war.

Four Billions In E Bonds Goal In 7th War Loan

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"In the Seventh War Loan your government is asking for the largest sum in investments by individuals in the history of America. Of the $7,000,000,000 individual goal, $4,000,000,000 is to be in E Bonds," Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. recently said in announcing the Advance Payroll Savings drive. The Secretary further stated:

"To meet this unprecedented but vitally necessary E Bond quota, the American worker, through the payroll savings plan, is being called upon for increased allotments and extra cash War Bond purchases to a greater extent than in any previous drive.

"War is the grimmest and greatest of human endurance tests. The side that wins, in the final analysis, is the side that is in there working and fighting at the end—the side with the stamina and the spirit to endure the long and terrible ordeal."

"The present war imposes its test no less upon civilians than upon the men in the armed services. Victory goes inevitably to the side whose men and women, in and out of uniform, stick longest and most unwaveringly to the performance of their jobs.

"There has been a fundamental change in the nature of the war. There is no limited objective now. The objective is total victory. The nearer we drive toward the enemy's heart, the costlier the war becomes. As we begin to go all out against the Japanese, so will our costs increase due to greater distances.

"I know that Americans need no appeal to meet the demands of the Seventh War Loan. The way for each of us here at home to meet these demands is through increasing War Bond purchases, unceasing devotion to his duty and his job and through a vivid knowledge that to win we must sacrifice."

"Our response to the Seventh War Loan will be the vindication of these men of their faith in us."

New Bond Film Features Talks By U. S. Leaders

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The War Finance Division of the U. S. Treasury has recently released a dramatic film, entitled "Mr. and Mrs. America," stressing the importance of War Bond ownership.

Early highlight of the film is a brief address by President Roosevelt who points out that 85,000,000 Americans have already invested billions of dollars in Bonds.

"Never before," states the President, "have so many people held such a direct share in a great national effort. To save—to buy and to hold all we can of War Bonds—this is a small service to ask of us who do not fight. Yet it is one of the biggest things we can do for our fighting men."

Following the President's speech, there is a series of quick cuts of battle action, followed by scenes of first aid, surgery, nursing, convalescence.

"Your War Bond has two sides," says a narrator, "One side fights the war, the other wins the peace... your own personal peace."

Philip Murray, President of the C.I.O., declares:

"The great Payroll Savings plan was introduced as a wartime measure to help finance the war and combat inflation. Few of us realized when it was first introduced that it also was a powerful instrument for winning the peace. Through a program of regular savings... men and women of America have an unprecedented opportunity to insure themselves of a substantial measure of security."

Next, William Green, President of the A.F.L., states:

"Men of labor know that in organization there is strength and the men and women of America are today organized in a vast War Bond army. If we remain united by buying and holding War Bonds until they mature, we shall be taking a great step toward that security we are all looking forward to in the future."

And then Eric Johnston, President of the Chamber of Commerce:

"It takes work and money—lots of it—to keep our giant industries operating at full steam. War Bonds you buy and hold account for a large part of that money today... War Bonds you buy today and hold for the future are vital stakes in our America—that is and your America-to-be."

An important part of the movie is an address by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau who, describing the many advantages of E Bonds, makes this unequivocal statement: "As Secretary of the Treasury, I can assure you that the Government will stand back of this Bond and fulfill every provision of it. It will be paid precisely and exactly according to the terms under which it was issued."

WITH the bluebird chirping again and the "red red robin now bob bobbin' around," baseball with all its future troubles is still in a far better way than it looked to be some weeks ago.

Many teams have lost many good men, but they still have some interesting talent left.

The main point is that we have had too many gonfalonc gallops in the last few seasons where either Yankees or Cardinals were so far in front by August that nothing remained of the races except a cloud of indigo dust far down on the stretch.

This new season there is a strong possibility for two of the closest races in many years, where almost anything can happen.

We put this point up to Larry MacPhail and the always astute colonel coyly confessed that such might easily be the case.

"We no longer have the matter of picking one or possibly two teams from the two leagues and tagging them on top in April. For one example no manager knows today just what ball players he will lose next week or next month.

A Big Question Mark

"What team could you pick on top in the American league at this point? Or the National league? And if you happened to have one or two favorites, how do you know how they'd look around the middle of May or the middle of June?

"Take Detroit. The Tigers still have Trout and Newhouse. Two fine pitchers—two big 1944 winners. But Wakefield is gone and so is Pinky Higgins, and who is left to give these two pitchers any runs to work on? You know where the Tigers were last summer until Wakefield returned.

"The Browns look as good as any other baseball team, but this is April—not June or July. Even Joe McCarthy doesn't know how the Yankees will stack up two months from now.

"But that isn't the important point. The main idea is that each league might easily have five or six clubs well-bunched through the summer—all with a chance to win—and that's what makes baseball. Naturally each home city likes to see its team with at least a chance—somewhere up with the bunch—not 20 games or even more away. You saw what happened last fall when the Browns, Tigers and Yankees were all bunched up. No one ever accused them of being great ball clubs. But still you couldn't get near their parks, with thousands turned away in St. Louis."

Race Counts Most

We have had a few ball players who could draw out the populace, no matter how far out their clubs were.

Babe Ruth was the top party in this list. I recall one season when the Babe played in Boston and Philadelphia before overflow crowds, although Boston and Philadelphia, far out of the race, had been playing to fewer than a thousand morbid souls daily. In later years Bob Feller was a big attraction on the days he worked. So was Ted Williams.

But in the main it has been the ball club that drew the crowds—the ball club up in the race. I have always believed that a few seasons ago the Dodgers, playing in the Yankee stadium, would have passed the 2,000,000 mark.

I still rate Detroit and Brooklyn as the two best ball towns in the country, and that isn't barring New York or Chicago. There was a time when Boston belonged in this preferred list. But when you get right down to the big check-up most of them need a team somewhere in the race.

For some odd reason, although their ball players come from all over the map, from the unknown hamlets and the farms, from spots more than 2,000 miles away, hometown pride is always concerned. This has always been a deep mystery to me—but there it is.

For some years the National league had two or three teams neck and neck down the stretch—such as the Cardinals and the Dodgers. When that was happening, the Yankees usually had their race packed away on ice by late July or early August.

Then, last fall, the American league suddenly switched into a hot three-club finish as the Cardinals were wrecking the National.

This all speaks for the complete honesty of baseball, which I believe today is taken for granted by every known proof, but it is of no vast help to nationwide interest.

I agree with Larry MacPhail that the 1945 season may easily give us five or six clubs from each of the two big leagues which might easily be under a blanket from time to time during the coming months.

It is my tip that baseball is on its way to one of the most interesting seasons in many years unless it is so badly riddled that it isn't given a chance.

Proper Hog Housing Insures Fair Profit

Poor House Will Not Produce Quality Hogs

ADEQUATE housing is one of the fundamentals of successful hog raising. This is especially true where the house is used for weanling pigs. Not generally recognized, extremes of cold and heat are harder on hogs than any other farm animal.

While a portable shelter is usually advisable, it may not always be possible or practical. A portable hog house should be easy to move, dry, admit plenty of sunlight, well ventilated, economical, cool in summer and warm and dry in winter, easy to clean, sturdy and of suitable size.

A colony house seven by eight feet is large enough to shelter four or five pigs that average 200 pounds, if they have access to pasture or outdoor lot. A safer rule would be to allow two square feet for each pig.

Pasture for portable hog houses is advisable, but where the building is stationary, it is recommended that the run immediately around the house be of concrete. The trough may be of hard wood—or of concrete. The fence should be of woven-wire, or a suitable board fence. Improved types of electric fences are inexpensive and suitable.

Housing space should not be wasted on weanling pigs unless they are long-bodied and carry their width uniformly, have short necks, neat and compact shoulders and plump hams and have smooth sides. Most attention should be paid to the development of the regions of highest priced cuts, such as hams and sides, less attention to length of head, color or other minor considerations.

corporation has secured license rights in the United States. Some 6,000 are now in operation, the number will be materially increased as soon as materials and manpower are available.

Another type of tiller is the Tillmaster, which will be under operation soon by the Climax company. Tested in the Pacific Northwest it was found suitable for various conditions, proving a real labor saver.

Milk Test Change

There are several factors which cause the butterfat test of milk to vary. The milk of a cow recently freshened may test high. This condition is a temporary one, and after it disappears the milk is likely to test lowest during the first few months following freshening. As the lactation advances, the test tends to increase and becomes high near the end of lactation. Tests of milk are usually highest during the coldest months and lowest in summer.

Notes of a New York Newsboy:

An exciting biog of a fine American, "Eisenhower" (Winston) by F. T. Miller, contains this interesting paragraph: "General Eisenhower was aroused to outbursts of indignation at the subversive groups that were giving 'aid and comfort to the enemy' at a time of our nation's peril. Ike's scathing remarks would scorch this paper. He had no tolerance for the 'damned deaf, dumb and blind fools' who could not see what was sure to happen if we failed to heed the warnings. The Axis was out to conquer the world and enslave humanity. Nazism and Fascism must be crushed if human freedom was to be saved. . . . Eisenhower had become known as 'Alarmist Ike' because of his constant predictions."

Move over, Walter—and make room for Eisenhower!

The same tome also offers a delightful anecdote about General Eisenhower's mother. . . . Whenever soldiers pass her home at Abilene, Kans., she proudly remarks to neighbors: "I have a son in the army, too!"

When he was given the Peabody award for "presenting outstanding radio humor over a period of 12 years," Fred Allen was introduced on the air this way: "Three great men of American humor," said the announcer, "—are Mark Twain, Will Rogers and Fred Allen!"

"Fine state humor is in," Allen ad-libbed. "Two of them are dead and one is out of work!"

Stories about newspapermen are as arresting as the yarns they write. Horace Greeley inspired some of the best bits of newspaperman stuff. He was once parked in a hotel lobby reading his Tribune when a stranger informed him: "I never read that sheet. I feed it to my . . . goats." . . . Greeley merely intoned: "If you continue reading other papers and feed your goats these Tribunes, one fine day you'll wake up and find that your goats know more than you do!"

When Joseph Pulitzer retired, he sent his staff a message which deserves to be framed in every newsboy's office. The Pulitzer prize advice is now a part of the masthead of a St. Louis newspaper: "I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy for the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing the news."

Add Good News: One of the Bund camps in New Jersey has been turned into a boys' vacation camp. Happy to learn that a part of the U. S. once again belongs to America. . . . The legit stage takes bows as a haven for intellectual issues. Yet the season has produced only one expert play on a serious theme: "A Bell for Adano." . . . Trend of the Times: We used to hear a great deal about Nazi supermen—now we hear more about American superfortresses.

Hoop-la isn't everything: A. J. Cronin's "The Green Years" has topped the fiction best-seller list longer than "Forever Amber," despite the latter's publicity barrage. . . . The house foreign affairs committee is now probing America's war criminal policies. We hope they will spotlight the peculiar activities of the state dept boys dealing with that problem. . . . Joseph Conrad once said: "Gossip is what no one claims to like—but everybody enjoys it." . . .

Our Sherlock Ho-Holmes Dept't: A UP dispatch states: "Rifle shots were fired into the office of Mario Berlinguer, high commissioner in Rome for the punishment of Fascist crimes. The official was wounded by flying glass. Police believe the shooting was an attempt to assassinate Signor Berlinguer." Awgwan!

Two soldiers and a sailor on Broadway, reports Jan Murray, were discussing their plans after curfew time. The first serviceman said: "Gee, it's midnight. Let's have some fun riding through the park in a hansom kebl!" . . . "Naw," naw'd the second. "Let's call up Mabel and Jean!" . . . "Oh, nuts!" said the third. "Let's do something really exciting! Let's go to some restaurant and watch the civilians eat!"

Among the strange sidelights of the war is the almost complete brushoff most newspapers have given to the fighting in Burma. Reports of the battles in that sector are buried on inside pages or ignored. Many Americans will probably be surprised to learn that bitter fighting has taken place there, which has resulted in important Allied victories. . . . And the battles are continuing. . . . During the last year the amount of Japs killed in the Burma theatre equals the number eradicated in the Pacific!

Civil War Draft Agent Lost Life in Notifying Draftees

A tombstone in a cemetery near Washington, Ind., bears this curious inscription: "In memory of Eli McCarty . . . killed while notifying drafted men."

Wounded in one of the early battles of the Civil war, Captain McCarty left the Union army in March, 1862, and became a government agent enrolling men for the draft. Aroused by the news of the draft a group of southern sympathizers vowed to shoot a government agent on sight. McCarty was their unfortunate victim.

Many Cross-Country Radio Programs Sent Via Wire

Millions of Americans do not realize that many radio programs they hear travel greater distances over telephone lines than through the air.

For example, a network program that originates in New York and is heard in San Francisco through a local station is transmitted some 3,000 miles by wire but less than 30 miles by radio waves.

A MESSAGE TO AMERICA ABOUT AMERICAN SOIL

THE SOIL is the very foundation of American prosperity and progress. Our independence and our opportunities are deeply rooted in it.

For years, people thought our soil was inexhaustible. New land was plentiful. New farms could be carved out of the wilderness cheaper and easier than old farms could be maintained. So when a farm lost its fertility, the farmer and his family simply moved to a new piece of land.

Today, it is a different story. Most of the good land has been cleared and is being farmed. When a farm loses its productive capacity, there may not be any place to move. And the nation's supply of food and fiber is reduced. That is why soil conservation has become so vitally important.

More than one hundred million acres of land have been seriously damaged by wind, water erosion, incorrect farming practices and other causes. Each year millions of acres more are being damaged, some beyond redemption.

Soil conservation methods are efficient, effective and easy to practice. Contour farming, terracing, strip-cropping, fertilizing and crop rotation are the principal methods used. Every farmer can get complete information and specific recommendations from his local Soil Conservation Service Representative, his County Agricultural Agent or his Vocational Agriculture Teacher. The land that each farmer cultivates is a national heritage. It should be passed on to the next generation better than it came to him. That is a trust which each man assumes when he makes his living from the soil.

Firestone believes that soil conservation is fundamental to the welfare of our country and its people. We believe soil conservation is everybody's business. That is why we are conducting extensive experiments on the 141-year-old Firestone Homestead Farm near Columbiana, Ohio, where our founder, Harvey S. Firestone, was born. That is why we are sponsoring soil conservation contests through the 4-H Clubs, cooperating with the Future Farmers of America and promoting the exchange of ideas through the Firestone Champion Farmers Association.

We have also recently published a new booklet on soil conservation entitled, "Our Native Land, a Trust to Keep," which you may obtain without cost. Simply send your request to the Firestone Farm Service Bureau, Akron, Ohio. I feel sure that you will find this booklet interesting and instructive.

SNAPPY FACTS

ABOUT RUBBER

Recent government tests demonstrated that synthetic truck tires show slower wear and less tread-cracking when operating at night than during daytime service. Atmospheric temperatures were given as the reason for this difference in service.

Like other rubber commodities, footwear should be treated properly to extend serviceability. Avoid tearing by putting on and removing rubber footwear carefully; wash outer surfaces after each wearing; dry out linings in room temperature; store in cool, dry, dark place and make sure to keep footwear free from folds or wrinkles.

HEAVY WIND CAUSES PROPERTY DAMAGE AT MARLEY

Monday morning, about 10:30 o'clock, a terrific wind storm swept through the yard of the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Handorf on Maple road, directly west of Marley.

The corn crib was blown over onto the house, breaking windows and shattering glass into the kitchen, dining room, bathroom and bedroom upstairs.

The back porch was badly wrecked and the apple trees in the orchard in the rear of the home, were twisted and uprooted. The yard was cluttered with boards and broken branches. The door of the barn was blown off while Mr. Handorf was standing in the door-way. No one was hurt.

WILL CO. PROBATION OFFICER ADDRESSES FRANKFORT PTA

Paul Ohman, probation officer of Will County courts, addressed the Frankfort P.T.A., meeting held in the Frankfort school Wednesday evening. He spoke of his experiences in problems of juvenile delinquency which perhaps has been the result of present wartime conditions. The mother who stays at home to care for her family, he said, is doing more for the future of our country, than many who neglect their families for war jobs.

Announcement was made of the United Nat'l Clothing collection, to collect 150 million pounds of wearable clothing of all kind, to be sent to needy and destitute peoples of war devastated areas. Clothing is to be brought to the school and collected by May 1st. All garments should be reasonably clean and washable clothing should be washed but not ironed. Babies, men, women, and children's clothes are needed. Also bedding, usable remnants of cloth a yard or more.

A social hour followed the meeting with refreshments served by Mesdames Stanley Johnson, Fred Harnack, P. Weischelberger and Roy Koerner. Installation of officers will be held at the next meeting May 9.

Luke Boynton who was in charge of the meeting asked Dr. Flotow to give a brief outline of the proposition. Dr. Flotow summarized the problem in four points which consisted of location, financing providing the supervision personnel and establishing a program which would provide interesting recreation and education fitted to the needs of the various age groups. A general discussion from the floor followed during which each delegate indicated approval. Sheldon Hauck, local coal dealer and delegate from the Business Men's Assoc. proposed that a suitable tract of land be procured as soon as possible. L. E. Martin, Manager of the City Service Oil Co and delegate from the New Lenox Athletic club made a motion to elect a temporary committee to be charged with making a full investigation of the possibilities and make recommendations to the organization at the next meeting.

Nominations from the floor and closed balloting resulted in the election of the following committee. Steve Sergeant, Chairman, Lee Frey, Lucille Stephenson, Dar Cooper, Lyman Martin.

Since this meeting the temporary committee have made a thorough investigation and are prepared to give their recommendations at a second public meeting to be held Thursday night April 19 at the Grade school.
